

I first met Evan in college and have worked with him professionally on set over the past few years. I'm a freelance director and have directed several soap opera-style series. Evan acted in a few of those projects. I've known Evan for about 9 years, since our college days. We worked together in school and continued working professionally for about 3 years after college. I absolutely believe Evan meets all of the expectations for this kind of position. In the series I directed, some projects involved working closely with child actors. Evan was fantastic with them—extremely friendly, outgoing, and natural. The kids genuinely enjoyed interacting with him, which made my job much easier as a director. Evan is also very relaxed and adaptable. I was born and raised in China, and we both attended NYU, where we were part of a very culturally diverse environment. Evan has always shown a great openness to different cultures and is consistently respectful and understanding. I would definitely hire him. Not only is he great with kids he is professional, a fast learner and very reliable. I 100% recommend Evan
